Deborah Guerriero: A Republican Woman with a Vision

By Betsy Turner // Misty Shields

Deborah Guerriero is the perfect example of the Republican Party; she is a gift to the Dallas republican women wing, hardworking, sincere and efficient.

Ms. Guerriero was born in Dallas deeply rooted with Republican conservative values that were passed on to her by her grandparents, Leon M. Taylor, the first City Electrician of Dallas and Erle Maxwell Taylor, President of Dallas County Schools. She graduated from Highland Park High School and went on to do her higher studies at Texas Tech University. Her serving heart led her to join the nursing career where she met her husband, Charles P. Guerriero, III, M.D to whom she was married for over 30 years until his death.

For 38 years, she served the medical community in a variety of ways. As a medical office manager and liaison for Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas she consulted with the planning of the building of Margot Perot Women's Building from the inception to its completion. She retired from the medical field and got involved in numerous political activities where she made a difference in the community.

Currently, she serves as Director of Campaigns for the Dallas County Council of Republican Women (DCCRW). She is also the 1st Vice President of the First Republican Women's Club of Dallas and is the Dallas County Election Judge. Through her various roles, she strives to be supportive of Dallas County and conservative values.

She is one of the most valuable representatives in the Republican Party. A striking thing about her is her dignified stature. She is unassuming and always puts on a smile. Indeed the party is fortunate to have such a dedicated and honest member in the Dallas Women's Republican wing. She enjoys the fundraising opportunities with the First Republican Women's Club.

Her heart's desire to serve the country was demonstrated by supporting the troops. She reflects on one of the more memorable missions the organization has accomplished. In 2009, they packed numerous care packages/boxes for our troops, which were flown by helicopter and dropped in the most remote part of Afghanistan.

Through the First Republican Women's Club, of which she was president for two consecutive years, she organized the greeting and sending off of troops at the DFW airport. Under her direction the club supports the USO (United Services Organization) library. Last year, they donated to the library children's books, in which the soldiers read a story while being video recorded. The book and video was then sent home to the soldier's child. In 2009, she arranged for 350 hand-knitted helmet liners to be shipped to Atlanta for distribution to departing soldiers on Christmas Eve.

Late September of 2010, Deborah partnered with Mrs. Laura Leppert, wife of Dallas Mayor Tom Leppert, to form the Daughters of World War II Veterans. As co-founder, she organized an event at the Majestic Theatre on February 19 th honoring all veterans, particularly those that fought at Iwo Jima. Through the Daughters of World War II Veterans, Deborah hopes to preserve the history of World War II and to educate our generations to come. "This is a part of history that is not taught in history books." she says. "I feel it is important to get the veteran's stories out there, to help people understand the pride these men had for our country." She hopes it will inspire patriotism as well.
